What Do Students Need to Know? Creating Space for Courageous Conversations about Disciplinary Knowledge

Participants will be invited into a different kind of conversation about student access and success—a courageous conversation about the core concepts that drive our disciplines—and challenged to consider ways to keep that conceptual knowledge at the center of meaningful collaborations across disciplines, areas, and institutions.

In this practicum, we will:

Analyze the challenges we face in helping students to develop the knowledge and critical thinking necessary for success in college courses.

Develop a framework for investigating ways to build connections among educators to support deeper student learning in a variety of disciplines.
